

Hint

- Think about how multiplying a number by 10 fits with the place values in the base-ten number system. Each place value is ten times larger than the value to its right.
- The Commutative property is all about the order in which you do things.
- The Distributive property is more about breaking a number into smaller parts and working with the parts.