

Possible Solutions

The solution to this example is a direct relationship between the average salary of each career and the level of education required.

As the salary for these careers increases, so does the level of education required. This tells us that in order to make more money, it is likely that higher levels of education are required.