

Mean absolute deviation is a measure describing the variability of a data set and is calculated by averaging the absolute value of the differences between each data point and the mean value of the data set.